@HollaLuna well, golly, if your only objection is to Pfizer's mRNA vaccine (a significant improvement over traditional vaccines) than you can take AstraZeneca or Moderna or Johnson & Johnson. Or even China's Sinovac or Russia's Sputnik. What's stopping you then?

@Sgt_Martin13 @7celo @eaterla Vaccines protect the people who receive them. That's the byproduct. Pfizer & Moderna aren't in the "protecting the people" business. They're in the "creating & moving product" business.

@Bzubyk @nspector4 Other possibility is since most Brits got AstraZeneca which has lower efficacy than Pfizer and Moderna, many are getting it, but vaccine is still working in that not stopping cases, but preventing severe ones thus doing its job.

According to the study #Sinovac is good as a priming vaccine and if followed by a third jab of either a full dose of #AstraZeneca or half dose of Pfizer vaccine will boost antibodies up to a level close to that generated by a full dose of #Pfizer Read <https://t.co/VEqgwOU5oV> <https://t.co/bGPVDKbiYE>

@x_BasicallyMe @AskJeevesIsBest @JaneOst_ WRONG! The vaccine wasn't just whipped up in a year. I Both Moderna and Pfizer were made using a process that had been in development for several years. Literally minutes of research could have stopped the spread of misinformation.
